BY R. J. CHILES.

The night was dark and stormy; not a star Pierced the deep veil that shrouded heaven's brow. A solid pall of blaskness, save afar, Sometimes the lightnings through the cloudlands nlough.

And the tall monarchs of the forest bow.

As the resistless winds swept o'er their crowns,

As the resistless winds swept o'er their crowns,

And by deep prodigies of strength somehow

With grandly-swelling, thander-rolling sounds.

Use feathers swept grand forest-kings from their secluded grounds.

Ten thousand furies rode the tempest wing.

And filled the heavens with their wailing cries,
And filled the heavens with their wailing cries,
Till nature, all one dark and frightful thing.
Had neight but error for the bravest eyes;
Fathouless blackness, folds of chon skies;
And vision seemed to all a thing of doubt:
And helf, that world of terror, see ned to rise
From that deep, universal gulf without.
And filled the trembling earth with its assaulting shout.

The mighty waves reared their dark forms on high, Vast mountains of the sea, whose peaks display Vast mountains of the sea, whose peaks display The wandering lightning from the troubled sky, Its baleful halos on the sea-snow lay.

And showed the depth of ocean's fearful sway.

And showed the depth of ocean's fearful sway.

Range upon range of liquid mountains rolled.

Far as the eye could pierce, o'er ocean gray.

And the storm's shunder-bell destruction tolled.

To many a foundered ship at sea and many a poble soul.

There was a splendid ship in sight of land,
With broken masts, and badly-tattered soil;
And haddled groups upon her decks did stand
With cheers robbed of all color, fearful, pale,
And shuddered, as the strong, remorseless gale
Threw round their ruined sea-home walls And cried with terror as a mournful wall.

Told where the sea the treach rous breaker laves. That soon would be the monument above their ocean graves. And mothers clasp young children to their hearts
In an evernal hearthreaking embrace;
The friend grosps friendly hand, then mournful

They friend grosps treated in the husband's face.
They fie's last look rests on the husband's face.
Thus 'mid the elements' wide-preading waste,
In that deep, farewell agony they wait
Until the gap is closed, the little space
That stretch between them and their awful fate.
Ere those two hundred souls pass in Death's

A rock-clamped lighthouse from its base wa

hurled,
And shattered on the wave-washed rocks below.
And shattered on the wave-washed rocks below.
Stern Nature scened about to wreck the world;
Her dauk and wrathful eye nortended woc.
Such as the globe before nor after know.
It seemed a presage to that dreadful time.
When the great judgment's final fire shall glow,
And the vast earth, with all her load of crime,
Spall in red, ocean flames, yield up her age subtime

Jane. "Upon the leafy lute strings of the trees
The zephyr sings its monody of sweetness.
The feathered warblers hearken to the breeze
And trill the echo of the song's completeness;
The little brooks, whose waters hum a time

Unto the overhanging reeds and grasses.
Unit their notes to bid thee welcome, June,
And nod their littles as thy footstep passes:
While bedbuys, flies, and antis rule o'er the land,
And evils more "too numerous to mention."
And last and worst of all—Commencements and The Press Convention. [Louisville Courier-Journal.

Editors Dispatch : In reading the notice of the freaks of lightning in the extract which you publish from the West Point Star to-day, one can but be struck with the fact that the fluid passed between and pretty close, we may presume, to two lightningrods, or so-called conductors, entering the house through an open window. This proves, does it not, that an ascending current of heated air has more affinity for lightping than metallic rods? I presume the larger the volume of this heated air the better the attraction presented. Is it not the rule that when men and animals take shelter under a tree, and the tree is struck by BUSINESS-CARDS. lightning, that if any are left it is the men ?the animals throwing off more heat, thus forming a larger current through which the fluid descends. The exception, I reckon, is from the position of the men, nearer the tree and probably just in the line of the lightning, or from the concussion of the air, and they are not struck at all.

TERRIBLE EFFECT OF THE ADMISSION OF WOMEN TO THE MEDICAL SCHOOL .- A conversation of the future: Hollis Holworthy (meeting Æsculapia Sawbones, who has just entered the medical school) : How do you do, Miss Sawbones? Miss Sawbones: Oh, pretty well, thank you. There is a trifling irritation of the muscular fibres of the anterior surface of the soft palate in the region of the anterior pillar of the fauces, a slight contraction of the inferior constrictor and the stylo and palato-pharyngeal muscles, and a little enlargement of the mucous follieles of the amygdake, but otherwise-(Poor Hollis was only prevented from rushing for the nearest doctor by Miss Sawbones somewhat scornfully assuring him that she had only a slight sore-throat.)-Harvard Lampoon.

We laugh at the African for beating his drum to make a noise, and yet the day is almost here when every American will own a cannon and shoot off whenever he can secure the slightest excuse .- Free Press. An Indiana man shaved off his moustache
